This latter pump is attracting considerable attention in the engineering field. It was first placed on the market about two years ago, already there are over eighty installed, with fifty more in course of construction.

There has been extensive development work in connection with the company's products, the most notable being in regard to the single-phase traction system which is now in use on several roads. A heavy single-phase electric passenger locomotive for the Pennsylvania R. R. terminals at New York has also been built and tested. A line of apparatus for the utilization of high-voltage direct currents has been developed, also apparatus for steel-mill operation, and a new form of integrating wattmeter has been put on the market. A number of generators of 7,500 and 10,000-KW. capacity have been built for direct connection to steam turbines. In lamps, the company has commenced the introduction of a metallized-filament incandescent lamp and a metallic-flame arc lamp, while progress has been made in developing the tungsten metal-filament incandescent lamp on commercial lines.
